

Islam and the West

<http://saskatoonlibrary.ca/eds/item?dbid=edsgea&an=edsgcl.13533426>

Salame, Ghassan

Description:

Many experts believe that Islam is a threat to Western nations. Islamists are interested in world affairs, and they do not trust the democratic-election process of the West. Western nations should become aware of the activities of Islamist groups, allow moderate Islamists to participate in Western government, and ensure the protection of human rights. The West also should protect minorities, help to resolve Arab-Israeli conflicts and be less selective when engaging in military intervention.

Source:Foreign Policy. Spring, 1993, Issue 90, p22, 16 p.